Budapest is one of the world's most beautiful cities. Both historical turbulence and a plethora of influences can be seen in the amazing mix of architecture, cuisine and culture. Close to the west, it is a realistic destination for short weekend breaks. It is also the ideal place for honeymoons or romantic getaways; the city is small enough to walk most of the sights and completely safe. Although Many tourist attraction have fees, there is a lot to be seen and absorbed just walking the streets, parks, markets and the peaceful Buda Hills.

EXPLORE BUDAPEST

Hungary Tourism Plc

The River Danube flows right through the heart of Budapest and thus creates a point of reference for visitors who are either on the old cobbled streets on the Buda side, or in the 19th century boulevards on the Pest side. Your interests will decide on which side of the Danube you will spend most of your time. Anyone interested in history will find it difficult to tear oneself away from Buda, where the Palace summit creates an atmosphere of medieval Budapest. Shopaholics will very soon be enticed by the other side of the river where the shops and nightlife compete for everyone's attention.

Budapest is really the fusion of three towns, Buda, Óbuda and Pest. Back in 106 AD, the Romans founded the city of Aquincum in the north-east corner of the Danube. Several changes of population later, at the end of the 9th century, the Magyars arrived. They were descended from a Finnish-Ugrian tribe with roots in Siberia. The Magyar city, with its palace and ring-wall, came to be called Buda, and Aquincum was later called Óbuda. The other side of the river was also settled, in the area which would later be called Pest.

Having been invaded by the Turks - and later by the Austrian army - in 1867 Hungary was elevated to an equal partner in the Austro-Hungarian double monarchy. Budapest became one of the most important ports on the Danube and soon also an industrial centre.

DO & SEE

Hungary Tourism Plc

Budapest will keep you busy in all weather. There are great parks, walks and outdoor baths for the good weather and a plethora of museums, lovely restaurants and outdoor baths, across a range of very different city quarters. There is no problem finding things to do in Budapest, on the contrary- you will struggle to find the time to do them all!

The Széchenyi Baths

Budapest is famous for its baths, the hot water that flows from a hundred streams. The Széchenyi Bath is Budapest's most famous outdoor swimming bath. This beautiful bath, in New Baroque style, is open all year round. The bathing chess players you have seen in pictures of Budapest spend their time here.

Address: 1146 Budapest, Állatkerti körút 11.

Public Transport: Metro 1 (yellow) line "Széchenyi Fürdő" stop

Opening hours: Outdoor swimming pools: 06.00 to 22.00, Steam rooms and thermal pools: 06.00 to 19.00, Pump hall: 09.00 to 17.00

Phone: +36 1 363 32 10

Tickets: Swimming ticket with changing cabin 5000HUF, 5200HUF at weekends

Internet: www.gotohungary.com/about-hungary/-/netaview/37366/szechenyi-thermal-bath

The Great Synagogue (Nagy Zsinagóga)

The Jewish quarter on the Pest side is one of the largest in Europe, the first Jewish settlers arrived in the 13th century in Budapest. This is where the Main Synagogue is located, the largest in the world outside of New York. There is a Jewish museum beside the synagogue, not to be confused with the separate Holocaust Museum far away in Páva St.

Address: 1074 Budapest, Dohány u. 2-8.

Public Transport: Metro2 (Red line) to Astoria stop, then 5 minutes walk.

Opening hours: Sun-Thu 10.00-17.00, early closing on Fridays 15.30/16.30

Phone: +36 70 533 56 96

Tickets: 3500 HUF per adult

Castle of Buda

The palace on Buda Hill contains several museums, including the Ludwig Museum, the National Gallery and the Budapest Historical Museum. There are also narrow alleys and magnificent churches. The walled Castle Hill (Várhegy) is a UNESCO World Heritage site. This is actually a collection of different sights to see, but many people simply enjoy wandering the now-quiet streets of this once-bustling district, taking in the views and enjoying generously-priced refreshments, so do allow a good few hours.

Address: 1014 Budapest, Fisherman's Bastion, Szentháromság tér 5.

Public Transport: Metro 2 (red line) to Széll Kálmán Tér, then take the castle bus up the hill.

Opening hours: Open all the time - some fees apply to entering Matthias Church and the upper platform of the Fisherman's Bastion.

Buda Hills

János-hegy.

On a clear day you should take the tram or bus to Buda Hills, via the cog railway. Here you will find peace and calm high above the city, with a magnificent view from

At the same time make sure to visit some of the caves that are open to the public. In the Pálvölgy cave, among other things, you can see the unique dripstone figures "The Elephant" and "Crocodile". The air in the caves is said to be good for respiratory infections.

Memento Park (Szoborpark Múzeum)

Here you will find one of Budapest's most remarkable attractions. When the proletarian dictatorship's enormous monuments and statues were no longer politically correct – after 1989-90 – they were moved from their conspicuous locations in the centre to a suburb of Buda.

Here – in this "Communist theme park" – among other things, is the gigantic statue of Lenin and Cubist statues of Marx and Engels.

City Park (Városliget)

The City Park is a popular venue no matter the season; at spring there is a peaceful lake here perfect to walk around or simply enjoy the sight of, as you have a picnic in the grass. The Vajdahunyad castle lies in the background and enhances the gorgeous view even more. There is also the possibility to rent a paddle boat and spend some time on the lake.

In winter time the lake is transformed into an ice rink and people gather here to skate, eat and socialize. If you don't have skates with you can rent them.

Chain Bridge (Széchenyi Lánchíd)

This iconic Budapest sight was the first of Budapest's bridges, built in 1847 and was an engineering marvel. The bridge was saved from destruction twice in the 1849 conflicts, but was eventually put out of action in Word War II as a huge battle raged across the city. Nowadays there is an annual festival called "the Summer on the Chain Bridge" - at this time only pedestrians are allowed and there are exciting events happening on the weekends.

Andrássy Avenue (Andrássy út)

This is a famous boulevard dating back to the early 1870's that has been declared a World Heritage Site. Apart from being a good shopping street in the lower reaches, it is home to many grand old villas, mansions and embassies, as well as a number of sights like a Heroes' Square, the State Opera House and an 8-sided square, if you will, called Oktogon. The first and oldest Metro, the yellow coloured M1 or "Millenium Metro" runs the length of Andrássy Avenue, just under the surface of the roadway.

Address: 1062 Budapest, Andrássy út

Public Transport: Metro 1 to Bajcsy Zsilinszky út or Heroes' Square

Opening hours: Public Street

House of Terror (Terror Háza)

Hungary has suffered through not one, but two terror regimes; the fascist and the Stalinist regimes. This museum serves as a reminder of the gruesome crimes committed during these hard times.

The fact is that the museum is housed in the very building that once was the headquarters of the ÁVH secret police. People were interrogated, tortured and killed here, and so the memory of these victims live on.

Address: 1062 Budapest, Andrássy út 60

Public Transport: Metro 1 (yellow line) to Vörösmarty utca

Great Market Hall (Vásárcsárnok)

This public market is known as a real slice of Hungarian daily life. Here you can see authentic greengrocers, cheese merchants and butchers all rubbing elbows in a wonderful cacophony of sounds and scents unlike anywhere else.

The Great Market Hall was built to replace the expansive outdoor markets in 1894, by architect Samu Pecz, also known for the red brick reform church by the Buda riverside north of Batthány tér. The Market Hall's basement area houses the less-scenic fish stalls and supermarket, the ground floor is the main area for all kinds of foodstuffs, and the upper floor (check out the beautiful wrought-iron staircases) is home to souvenir stands and fast-food joints, Hungarian-style. You must try some deep-fried dough or Lángos.

DINING

Costes Downtown

Hungarian food is honest and despite today's influences from all over the world, the Hungarians are still preserving their traditions. Modern Hungarian cuisine is among the best in Europe and also very inexpensive. You will find most restaurants, and the best ones, on the Pest side.

Menza

People go to Menza for the company rather than for the food, which is quite conventional. The restaurant is situated on Liszt Ferenc tér, one of the best squares in Budapest to go to for having a drink or two. Menza's large flowered wallpaper and cloth lampshades create a cosy atmosphere.

Address: 1061 Budapest, Liszt Ferenc tér 2.

Public Transport: 4-6 tram / 105 Bus to Oktogon

Opening hours: Mon-Sun: 10.00-00.00

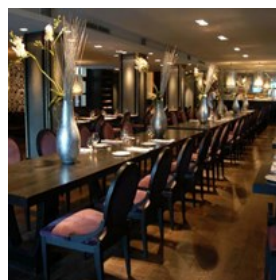

Phone: +36 1 413 14 82

Internet: www.menzaetterem.hu/english.php

Baraka

Baraka is located on the city's main boulevard, within the Andrásy Hotel and is definitely worth a visit. This restaurant offers gourmet food served in a personal atmosphere. The chef mixes French and Asian influences, but does not neglect his Hungarian roots.

Photo: Baraka

Address: 1051 Budapest, Dorottya utca 6.

Public Transport: Metro 1 (yellow line) to Bajza utca, then 3 minutes walk

Opening hours: Mon- Sat: 11:30-15:00, 18:00-23:00 Sun: closed

Fakanál

Anyone who wishes to taste traditional Hungarian cuisine, should head to Fakanál, upstairs in the old market hall. There, you can try several different buffet dishes to the sound of gypsy music.

Address: 1093 Budapest, Vármház körút 1-3.

Public Transport: M4 (green line) to Fővám tér

Opening hours: Mon-Fri: 10:00-17:00, Sat: 10:00-14:00, Sunday: closed

Arcade

One of the best restaurants on the Buda side is Arcade, with the same founder as the Café Kör. The owners have chosen a somewhat more luxurious style here, both in the menus and the decor, and serve modern Hungarian cuisine with influences from France and Italy.

Address: 1126 Budapest, Kiss János Alt. u. 38.

Public Transport: 105 bus to Nagy Jenő utca

Opening hours: Mon-Sat: lunch: 12:00-15:30, dinner: 18:30-23:00 Sun: closed

Borkonyha Winekitchen

Borkonyha Winekitchen is a mix of a contemporary family restaurant and a French bistro, though the chef Ákos Sárközi often includes Spanish and Italian specialities on the menu. A huge part of their concept is their extensive wine list which includes 200 different wines, most of them Hungarian. This was the third Hungarian restaurant to win a Michelin star, so quality is high.

Address: 1051 Budapest, Sas u. 3.

Public Transport: Metro 1,2 or 3 to Deák Ferenc tér, then cross Elisabeth Park and walk along Sas utca

Opening hours: 12:00-14:00 and 18:00-23:30

Bock Bisztró

Bock Bisztró was created by a well renowned chef and a skilled sommelier. The result is a restaurant offering Hungarian cuisine with an international twist, accompanied by an extensive wine list. The menu also has some Spanish tapas.

Address: 1073 Budapest, Erzsébet körút 43-49.

Public Transport: 4-6 tram to Király street

Opening hours: Mon-Sat: 12:00-24:00 Sun: closed

Borssó Bistro

Borssó Bistro has a menu containing both traditional Hungarian cuisine and French food. The dishes change with the season and you can usually find some special weekly offer.

For a special treat, come here for a "wine dinner" - a 6-8 course dinner enjoyed with carefully selected wine that is presented by the wine makers, accompanied by live jazz music.

Address: 1053 Budapest, Királyi Pál u. 14.

Public Transport: 4-6 tram to Harminckettesek tere

Opening hours: Mon: closed, Tue: 18.00-23.00 Wed-Sun: 12.00-23.00

Klassz

Klassz has about 130 different wines to choose from, and it is undeniably important to choose a nice wine when the food is so exquisite. You can have foie gras, mangalica pork and lamb knuckle, to name but a few. At this exclusive restaurant, there is an unusual system that basically means that no-one can reserve a table, so get there early!

Address: 1061 Budapest, Andrássy út 41.

Public Transport: Metro 1 (yellow line) to Oktogon

Opening hours: Mon- Sat 11.30-23.00 Sun: 11.30-23.00

Gerlőczy Café

Gerlőczy Kávéház, as it is known in Hungarian, is a charming café with a large and pleasant terrace area, in a distinctive wedge-shaped area formed by the intersection of Gerlőczy and Vitkovics streets in Budapest's 5th district. It is just far enough (3 blocks) from Váci utca to be saved from complete tourist inundation, though it is very popular with locals in the busy banking and administration area of the 5th district. The statue in front of the café is that of Károly Kammermayer, the first mayor of the Budapest, combined from Buda, Pest and Obuda in 1873.

Tanti Restaurant

This modern simply-decorated restaurant has only been in operation since September 2014, but has already won international acclaim in an incredibly short amount of time, landing a Michelin star (only the fourth to do so in Budapest) (though to be fair Chef István Pesti has done the rounds, and worked at numerous big-name restaurants around town before opening this masterpiece of simplicity. Tanti is named after a dear aunt, and like a fussy aunt, is quite strict about mealtimes. Dinner is served from 6pm until midnight, though lunch is also offered from noon until 3pm.

Address: 1124 Budapest, Ápor Vilmos tér 11-12.

Public Transport: M2 (Red) metro line to Széll Kálmán Square, then Tram 59 uphill to Ápor Vilmos tér

CAFES

Hungary Tourism Plc

Budapest has many lovely cafés, ranging from breakfast bars and stylish eateries to the most delicious confectionaries, (a sort of a cross between a café and a bakery, with just a few seats). You are sure to find just the perfect type to fit your mood. Simply choose a cream cake and a coffee and relax!

Gerbeaud

Gerbeaud is not only a café but also a rather important sight in Budapest. This is where the aristocracy went during the time of the Dual Monarchy. The large halls have preserved their appearance to this day and you will feel transported back to a time of sumptuous delicacies in luxurious surroundings. Do go and take a look at the cakes in the glass cases and choose whatever takes your fancy, not forgetting a cup of coffee or a steaming hot chocolate or cocoa (not the same here). We recommend the signature "Gerbeaud" slice, a delicious multi-layered cake made of walnut and apricot jam, covered with thick chocolate.

Address: 1051 Budapest, Vörösmarty Tér 7.

Public Transport: Metro 1 (yellow line) Vörösmarty tér stop

Ruszwurm

Ruszwurm on Castle Hill, is the Buda side's answer to Gerbaud, still run by one of the country's confectionary dynasties. The interior is very "Fin de siècle", with red velvet curtains, marble tables and beautiful Biedermeyer furniture. (It is quite amazing really that this building was not destroyed during WWII, as most of the district's buildings were reduced to rubble). Cream cakes, strudel or rétes are the order of the day here, washed down with coffee, hot chocolate or cocoa.

Spinoza Café and Restaurant

Spinoza is a gem of a café/restaurant which even has a built in theatre. It is located deep in the Jewish quarter of the city, quite a few minutes walk along Dob utca from either Astoria Metro station on one side, or Teréz Körút, the inner city ring road, on the other. It is a laid-back place, with cool piano music in the evenings, and a klezmer band on Friday evenings. The food is very reasonably-priced, and a good mixture of international cuisine. While the menu does not include pork, it is not actually a kosher establishment.

Művész Cávéház (Artists' Café)

Művész is one of the archetypal cafés where writers, philosophers and great minds would meet around the end of the Century.

This is no longer true nowadays, but the location is still hard to beat. It makes a great stop on a hike up Andrassy Avenue to Heroes' Square, when coffee and a cream cake could be just the thing to perk you up. It does get very busy around lunchtime and the outdoor seating is obviously in greta demand, but if you can hook a wicker chair, then this is an unbeatable place for a spot of Budapest people-watching.

Address: 1061 Budapest, Andrassy út 29.

New York Café

This extravagant café is a wonder of marble and brass, and really exudes the glory of grand times past. It has come under the ownership of the Boscolo Hotel Company, as it is attached to the Boscolo Hotel Budapest (formerly the New York Palace) Have your wallet at the ready, as this is not the cheapest of places to stop in for a bite, but if one can appreciate the luxurious setting and the exquisite service, it is well worth it!

Address: 1073 Budapest, Erzsébet krt. 9-11.

Callas Café

The Callas Café was constructed in neo-renaissance style in 1880. It opened as a café the year before the Opera did. In the early years of the 20th century it changed hands several times and was eventually the headquarters of a British bank between the wars. It was lovingly rennovated in 2006 by David Collins and is a truly elegant place to enjoy a drink before an opera performance, or coffee and a cake as a break from a stroll up Andrassy Avenue. A small musical ensemble performs here most evenings.

Address: 1067 Budapest, Andrássy út 20.

Hadik Café

Hadik Café is a fixture on the main avenue and tram lines 18,19,46 and 47/49 from the green Liberty Bridge and Gellért Baths west into Buda. Although it is in a built up area, it fronts on a tiny green park, which it uses to the maximum degree, as folks young and old sit outside and enjoy a little people-watching.

Address: 1111 Budapest, Bartók Béla út 36.

Public Transport: Metro 4 to Móricz Zsigmond körtér, then 5 minutes walk to Bartók Béla út

Centrál Café

"Respecting the traditions and being open to novelty" This best describes Central Café outlook. We are proud of our ancestors and we know the challenges of today. Rather than evoking the past Central says it aims to revive the mentality that once made this place one of the intellectual centres of Budapest. A large part of this "intellectual scenery", the delicate ambience, the delicious meals, the delightful desserts or refreshing drinks, the atmosphere is created by the clientele themselves. They say that all who drop in for a cup of coffee in the morning, for a lunch at noon, for a glass of wine before going to the theater, or for a light dinner after it or perhaps participate in the creation of Central Café as part of its creative audience.

BARS & NIGHTLIFE

Hungary Tourism Plc

Budapest has all kinds of nightlife, from smoky beer halls to Bohemian artists' clubs and expensive champagne bars. Recent years have seen the rise of the ruin bars, a curious phenomenon where derelict buildings are given a new lease of life as bars, nightclubs and restaurants, complete with quirky decor and a very laid-back atmosphere.

Spoon

Spoon is a good choice if you want to enjoy a long drink and the view across the Danube. It is a large ship anchored by the Pest quay, with a café, popular bar and sushi restaurant.

While this is not a cheap place, the unusual location, setting and outstanding views make it well worthwhile.

Address: 1051 Budapest, Vigadó tér 3

Szoda Bar Budapest

This well-known and unusual bar has reams of cartoons on the ceiling and row upon row of guess-what behind the bar. Yes the soda bottle it was named for are out in force and sode-related drinks, like the inimitable Hungarian Fröccs (a white wine soda spritzer) are very popular and quite excellent here.

Szimpla Kert

You have heard anything about Budapest's Ruin bars, then the name Szimpla Kert has probably already arisen. It is the first and the best known. It created the archetype of the busy-but -relaxed bar in the heart of downtown Budapest, by making use of a building that might have otherwise remained unused. With mismatched furniture, wacky decor, cheap beer and a loyal regular crowd, this place soared in popularity and spawned a host of similar operations that became the ruin bars.

Szimpla is still going strong in Kazinczy Street, now with an excellent farmers' market held on the weekends, a café and sister bars in Berlin and Vác.

Address: 1075 Budapest, Kazinczy u. 14.

Public Transport: M2 (Red) metro line to Astoria or Blaha Lujza tér...

Tűzraktér

This artistic bar was originally opened in 2005 in Tüzoltó (Fireman) Street. It has kept the name, though the location has shifted to a disused elementary school and its sizeable courtyard. It is an artist collective, studio and exhibition space, aimed at providing a relaxed communal space for like-minded creative individuals. It is also a popular bar, and nightclub, but an odd one full of artistic-types, who drift down from the studios upstairs.

With its artistic crew, there is no shortage of unique decor, even though the place covers a huge 5300 square metre area, which makes it fun to explore of an evening. There are scores of musical events, book-readings, clothes swaps, and regular sessions, such as informal Hungarian lessons for foreigners every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday.

Address: 1060 Budapest, Hegedű u. 3.

Public Transport: M1 Yellow Metro to Oktogon. Located one block south of Liszt Ferenc Tér

Opening hours: until 02.00

Ellátó Kert

In the Summer, Ellátó kert is a great open air place for cyclists, strollers and all to enjoy the genuine ruin-pub atmosphere in the very heart of the 7th District, the

"drinking district".

An enclosed version has now been constructed (by the bar's staff and locals actually). This warm bar awaits you with gates open wide, discounted beer on Fridays and a cool atmosphere all year round.

Address: 1075 Budapest, Kazinczy u. 48.

Public Transport: M2 (Red) metro line to Astoria or Blaha Lujza tér...

Grandio Bar

This bar is heavily connected with a city hostel of the same name. It is party place, so be prepared for lots of tipsy teenagers, "Jaeger trains", Karaoke, beer pong and so on.

There is a large garden though and this provides some welcome opportunities for chilling out.

Address: 1072 Budapest, Nagy Diófa u. 8.

SHOPPING

Hungary Tourism Plc

Budapest is famous for its moderately priced antiques which you can find in places such as the Falk Miksa utca quarter. One of the most popular Hungarian souvenirs is handmade Herend porcelain, which has been in production since 1828. The beautiful, hand-painted vases, dishes and porcelain have won many gold medals at various world exhibitions. The factory's own shop is on József Nádor square.

Around the corner lies Vörösmarty Square, where you can either gather energy with a cup of coffee and a cream cake at the city's most famous patisserie, Café Gerbeaud, or carry on to the former Luxus department store with the international fashion houses' most famous stores.

The Váciutca pedestrian street between Vörösmarty square and the Market Square is Budapest's largest shopping centre. This is where you will find the international fashion houses' own stores, souvenir shops, wine shops and several galleries. Do not miss the small cross-streets with their sweet little shops and upscale wine merchants. Many Budapest residents think that the prices in this area are too high and instead do their shopping in Pest's gigantic Westend or in the shops in the Great Ring, which is what they call the boulevard around the city centre.

The new, young shops are scattered around the centre on the Pest side. Király Street is being transformed into a design centre. Do not miss Nagycsarnok on Vámház street, Budapest's great market hall built in 1896, which has everything that Hungary can offer in the way of food. Here you can buy Hungarian specialities such as, for example, the world-renowned Tokay wine Tokaji Aszú. "The wine of kings, the king of wines" – its special flavour is of sweet, overly ripe and shrivelled grapes. A dessert wine which complements cakes and desserts perfectly. On the first floor, they sell high quality Hungarian souvenirs such as cloth, garments etc.

SPAS AND THERMAL BATHS

Hungary Tourism

Hungary is famous for its thermal waters. The thin crust of the carpathian Basin means that mineral-rich warm water bubbles up almost all over the country. The capital Budapest has a great many to choose from, you can soak in modern elegance one day and the next day travel back to the victorian age or visit the Turkish baths of the middle ages, all within Budapest!

Gellért Thermal Baths

The Gellért Thermal Baths are housed just behind the imposing Art Nouveau Gellért Hotel near the Liberty Bridge in Budapest. There are a range of pools of different

Rudas Thermal Baths

The famous Rudas Thermal Baths, perfectly located on the Buda side of the Danube, in the shadow of Gellért Hill and the Elisabeth Bridge. This bath dates back to 1550, and though not obvious from outside, there are still some beautiful original Turkish features including a dim central dome and octagonal baths, surrounded by 4 pools, each with a different temperature. At the southern end is a station where people can purchase bottles of the thermal water, which is drunk for its curative properties. Don't drink the bathwater, obviously!

In 2014 a new wellness section opened at The Rudas Thermal Baths.

Lukács Baths

Szent Lukács or St Luke's Baths is an imposing building visible from the Danube, just north of Margaret Bridge on the Buda Side. This was originally one of the most elegant and sophisticated baths, built on a site that was earlier the domain of the Turkish Vizier, Pasa Mustafa. You will find a great wealth of opportunities inside and out, including 5 main pools and a plethora of smaller Kneipp pools, plunge pools, saunas and even a salt cave.

Lukács Baths are also the winter home for the hedonistic nighttime spa parties know as Cinetrip Parties. (In the summer, Cinetrip Parties are held at Széchenyi Thermal baths.)

Airport

Budapest's airport, Liszt Ferenc International Airport, lies 16 km south-east of the city. The airport minibus service is very convenient and has a fixed price for transport into the city. The cheapest way is to take bus 200 E from the airport to the Köbánya-Kispest underground railway station, which takes approx. 20 minutes. You can purchase a metro ticket there and travel in to the city centre for a small amount, though it will take another 20 minutes or so.

Public Transport

Budapest has an excellent public transport system. The same ticket is good for a single journey on any of the main types of transport: of underground railway, buses and trams. The Budapest card includes admission to over 60 museums and discounts for sightseeing, swimming, etc.

Budapest has three railway stations: Keleti, Nyugati and Deli, which are linked by the underground railway. The MAV railway company operates between the stations.

65+ EU citizens can get free transport with ID.
